The concept of Global Public Investment (GPI) is being co-created as a means of collectively financing sustainable development and securing global public goods. It provides a way for all countries to contribute to, benefit from and jointly manage public funding for global objectives: all benefit, all decide, all contribute.

International cooperation has never been more needed, but the current system of “aid” is outdated and ineffective. How does it need to change? What could a better system look like?

Join the co-creation of GPI as we build the future of international cooperation.
