

Call for Two New Study Group Leaders for the Development Studies Association of Ireland (DSAI)

The DSAI is calling for applications for a convenor for each of two new study groups!

DSAI “Climate and Development” Study Group

DSAI “Business and Development” Study Group

What is DSAI?

The Development Studies Association of Ireland (<https://www.dsaireland.org/>) is a dynamic and rapidly expanding, membership-led and driven organization. It is concerned with issues that impact International Development globally and has a particular emphasis on dialogue between development researchers, policy makers and practitioners. DSAI organizes a high-profile annual conference, a research methods summer workshop, and multiple study group seminars, lectures and events during the year. It welcomes individuals interested in, studying or working in the area of international development.

What is the role of the study Group convenor?

The role of the study group convenor is dynamic and varied. You will be provided with a budget and get the opportunity to organise events and seminars, with the support of the DSAI Co-ordinator and Communications Officer. Convenors generally organise three events during the year and provide some assistance with the Annual conference. The position is voluntary and further information on DSAI study groups can be found on our website here: <https://www.dsaireland.org/groups/>

If you are interested in becoming a study group convenor, please submit your cv and a one page statement outlining why you would like to lead the study group and what skills you can bring to meeting the goals of DSAI, to Clodagh Colleran (collerac@tcd.ie) by Friday 28th February, 2020 with the name of the study group in the subject line.

For informal inquiries, please contact the current Chair of the Association, Pádraig Carmody via email at carmodyp@tcd.ie or by phone at (01)896-1243.
